Origin and Background: (American) Winston Barlow was born in Charlotte, North Carolina. His father, Oscar, was a well paid lawyer whose clientele consisted mainly of members of the local crime family. Winston's mother, Edith, was a shy meak woman who was dominated by her bullying husband. Oscar Barlow maintained a respectable public persona while he wa trulys a monster to his family. He used to beat her and Winston on a regular basis.

This stopped when Winston reached the age of fifteen. One night Oscar had beaten Edith so badly, she fell unconscious. Winston snapped, he retrieved his father's pistol from the study and shot Oscar five times (even though he was dead on the first shot). Winston was later arrested by the police for his father's murder. Winston didn't struggle; he had accepted his fate. That was until he learned that his mother died from her injuries and the police pinned her death on him as well. He loved his mom. To say that he killed his mother infuriated Winston.

That night he escaped from Police custody and went on the lam. Winston, now calling himself Sam Heyward, found himself doing odd jobs for a small circus that travelled throughout the southern states of the U.S.

As he travelled from city to city, he would commit small crimes for the hell of it. He loved the rush he got for making the police look like fools. Eventually he graduated to crimes of higher significance and value. That's when Winston became the Gunslinger. He found that his preferred choice of targets were the banks. There's nothing like the thrill he gets from robbing banks and rubbing it in the faces of the cops. He will never give up a chance to humiliate the police when he can.

His goggles were a gift from the super-villain, Madame Venom. They are currently together as lovers and criminal partners but it is unknown for how long. Both have strong personalities that will ultimately clash over dominance in the long run.

Motivation: Anti-government thrill-seeker who hates the police.
